

CAPRI Developer Seminar - 2025

Aim: The Conference brings together researchers, software developers, and agricultural economists to explore advancements in the simulation model CAPRI for economic analysis in agriculture. The event will discuss the latest policy simulations, data updates, and methodological improvements. Special focus will be given to contributions from the Horizon projects BrightSpace and ACT4CAP, which aim to enhance CAPRI's capabilities in assessing sustainability, climate impacts, and policy interventions. Attendees will gain insights into CAPRI methodologies, fostering collaboration between CAPRI developers to improve decision-making in the agricultural sector. The conference also provides a platform for networking, encouraging knowledge exchange among experts and newcomers alike. It is open to students and PhD candidates interested in agricultural economic modeling, offering them an opportunity to engage with leading researchers and practitioners.
